invention is directed to a head for deionized water dispensers that allows one to change the existing head without effecting a change in the distribution system. Water dispensers have been used for many years in connection with commercial and household applications. Such commonly used dispensers must periodically refill to remain in operation. Furthermore, it has been a common practice to provide a large reservoir of cold, usually frozen water for such dispensers to satisfy the continuous use requirements and particularly during use in the winter season. Although such reservoir may be adequate for a period of time under normal conditions, in tropical and other climates, a large storage volume of cold water is entirely unnecessary and ineffective in response to the immediate needs of the user. What I like most about IBBFF is they have a glassware and tableware matching their theme decor. * Links that take you outside our site are automatically identified by our spider software and highlighted in your current browser window.
